Chameleon Website: Project Use Case

UML:

Figure 1: Chameleon Website Use Case for the Project Page.

Use Case Description:

1. User: At first the user opens the chameleon website through the web browser by logging in and gaining access to the website functionality.

2. Home Page: And next the user views the home page after successfully logging in with the central hub providing the overview of the chameleon's core information, its recent updates and its navigation process.

3. Navigate to Project page: The user, who wants to know more about the projects involved with the chameleon company are in this page. This page contains the details of all the sub companies within the chameleon company. The project page displays a visually appealing layout containing a comprehensive list of chameleon projects and ensuring easy navigation and access to relevant details.

4. Project details: The user selects a particular project from the list, showing a deeper exploration. This action directs them to a dedicated page highlighting comprehensive details about the chosen project including all the information but not limited to descriptions, objectives, achievements, and links to associated content, presenting a comprehensive view for the users understanding.